4SPACE's Chantelle Baier Leads Women Entrepreneurs to the Moon

The world's first female-owned space company, 4SPACE, will continue its pioneering work when it sends a Jeff Koons artwork to the Moon on February 14, creating history's first off-planet art gallery.

The project – carried by NASA's Commercial Lunar Payload Services (CLPS) on a SpaceX rocket and landed on the Moon by Intuitive Machines' lunar lander – will focus on a collection of 125 specially-created Jeff Koons Moon Phase sculptures, which will be displayed at the South Pole of the Moon in perpetuity.

The audacious project is the work of 4SPACE CEO and founder, Ms Chantelle Baier, who has project-managed the Jeff Koons art gallery as part of her ensuring that more cultural and aesthetic projects can go into outer space, and that non-traditional social groups can participate in the space project.

"I established 4SPACE in 2017 to bring art, design and media into outer space," said Ms Baier, who was educated in both science and design disciplines. "4SPACE's initiative to install Jeff Koons' artwork on the Moon is a celebration of the creativity of art alongside science and engineering. I hope it also opens up horizons for people who have not traditionally been include in space, and they could be artists, women, people of color and musicians. I'm hoping that the Jeff Koons art gallery on the Moon makes the impossible seem possible."

Ms Baier said the intention of the NASA Artemis missions to put the first female and Black astronauts on the Moon in 2025, were important steps in the space exploration story, but it was also important that women and other non-traditional constituents were influencing the business and culture of space.

"I'm a woman, I come from a background of fashion design, and I grew-up on an isolated farm in Saskatchewan," said Ms Baier. "So, I understand the outsider perspective when it comes to the business of space. I believe there's millions of women out there who perhaps haven't become involved in space because they see too many barriers, but I say they have something to contribute and not only in the disciplines of science and engineering."

On February 14 the Intuitive Machines' Nova-C lunar lander will launch from Cape Canaveral's historically significant launchpad 39A on a SpaceX Falcon 9 rocket. Eight days after take-off, the lander will descend to the Moon's surface with a polycarbonate transparent cube fastened to its exterior, which contains the 125 Moon Phase sculptures created by Jeff Koons.

Ms Baier said 4SPACE's polycarbonate cube had been designed to withstand the Moon's environment and it would remain in its position at the lunar South Pole forever, protected by the Artemis Accords which gives 'historic site' status around a landing zone.

The Jeff Koons Moon Phase sculptures are each 1-inch in diameter and will adorn the Moon's surface, while a set of 15-inch replicas will be auctioned on Earth to commemorate the Moon landing. 4SPACE will also market an NFT photograph of the Jeff Koons Moon-phase sculptures in their new home on the Moon.

The last manned mission to the Moon was in 1972, and the NASA Artemis mission will put the first woman astronaut, Black astronaut and Canadian astronaut on the surface of the Moon in 2025. However, this year several unmanned projects will touch-down on the lunar surface.

Ms Baier said with renewed interest in the Moon it was a good time for non-traditional participants to become involved.

"We all accept the idea that space travel is powered by human science and engineering, but humans also express themselves with art, design, media and other forms of entertainment," she said. "We will now have an art gallery on the Moon, exhibiting Jeff Koons' work, in perpetuity. Humans rely on technology, but we also define ourselves by aesthetics. It's important that different aspects of humanity are expressed in space."

Chantelle Baier formed the world's first female-owned space company, 4SPACE, in 2017 and in June 2021 entered into a collaboration with Intuitive Machines, a then privately held company in its development phase.

Ms Baier said 4SPACE was pioneering developmental strategies in space exploration and commercialization, which included non-traditional players such as women, artists and even consumer brands.

"I was raised on a farm in Saskatchewan, with limited access to modern comforts. I was inspired by my mother's questioning of NASA's expenditure on space programs over families in need, and this perspective has profoundly influenced my approach to the space industry, helping me focus on balancing technological advancement with humanitarian efforts. Our company culture emphasizes Science, Sustainability, Philanthropy, Education, and Nurturing Hope for future generations."

The current mission prioritizes green energy, it piggybacks on an existing NASA-funded mission, and creates opportunities for charity fundraising. Notably the Jeff Koons Moon Phases auctions will contribute to Doctors Without Borders and amfAR, an AIDS research foundation.

In line with these values, 4SPACE has collaborated with MEDIA.COM, the online network which addresses the profile authenticity and information integrity challenges of other networks, by featuring Chantelle Baier as Profile No.1 on the Media.com network.

(Chantelle Baier is the daughter of Pius & Heidi Baier of Macklin, SK.)

As a symbol of human curiosity and the desire to achieve, Jeff Koons: Moon Phases comprises 125 unique artworks, each consisting of 3 components: a sculpture that will be installed on the Moon, a sculpture that will stay on the Earth, and an NFT that corresponds with the sculptures on the Moon and the Earth. The 125 miniature stainless steel Moon Phase sculptures will be displayed on the Moon in a cube, which was designed and built by 4Space in consultation with Koons. The Moon Phase artworks are associated with individuals who made important accomplishments in human history. The list of names is universal, from various cultures throughout the world, fields, and time periods. Displayed in front of each artwork, the names memorialize the figures. In this way, Koons honors some of the greatest achievements of the past to inspire future generations.

Jeff Koons: Moon Phases is Koons's most ambitious work to date and brings together leaders in the scientific and creative fields. Koons's project was initiated by Patrick Colangelo of NFMoon and Chantelle Baier of 4Space, and is presented by Pace Verso. Intuitive Machines will bring Koons's sculptures to the Moon as part of the historic IM-1 mission, marking the first authorized artworks to be placed on the surface of the Moon.

Hello there & Happy March to everyone!

Your local Kin Club has been busy this past month leading up to the Annual TeleMiracle Telethon We've been putting in hours at our local arena selling TM hands and raffle tickets. The winners of our 2 baskets were Marie Leibel from Denzil and Brad Bogen from Macklin.

We also changed the date of our Toy Bingo that used to be held in November to the "FAMILY DAY Holiday" of Feb 19th. We had an awesome turn-out, and we can't even express how amazing our community is for supporting this fundraiser. Below is the list of Business', individuals, and farms that we cannot say enough "THANK-YOU's" to!!

Six of us went to TeleMiracle this year in Regina and worked a variety of places: Security, Treasury, Food Services, and on the phones. We presented our cheque that was a combination of money from The School, Our Toy Bingo, the Villa's Bingo, personal donations, and a Special donation from the Rolheiser family in memory of Fred & George Rolheiser in the amount of $4,000. Our Cheque to the TeleMiracle Foundation was $16,029.29. In total, TeleMiracle raised over $6 million Dollars ~ WOW.

We are having our KIN KINDness award again as we had such great responses with it last year. Visit our Facebook page for more information. The Draw will happen on March 8th and the winner will receive $200 in Chamber Bucks

News from the Hall

Hello All.

I hope you are all ready for spring. Who knows what kind of weather March is going to throw at us. If you are travelling watch the weather forecasts and take the appropriate safety precautions.

There was an incident recently in an area not too far from here where a farmer was in a grain bin, he sunk into some wheat and became stuck there. The local fire department was called to help free the man. They immediately called the Wainwright and Edgerton Fire Departments for help on this call. Both of these departments have special equipment designed to help people trapped in these kinds of situations. Thankfully, after "a long and difficult extrication" the man was freed and was uninjured. It is because of the efforts of 4 different departments and having the proper equipment on scene that this rescue was performed successfully. In light of these events, and because of many conversations we have had in the past about this exact scenario, we have booked a training day with the Canadian Agricultural Safety Association. They are going to bring out a specially designed trailer that we are going to put grain into. (Thank you to Bill Stang for letting us "borrow" 130 bushels of wheat.) This course is very popular and the wait time for booking the trailer is usually over a year. They have had a department cancel a week-end in April so we spoke for that time slot. We will spend a day training on how to help people trapped in these situations. The course can train up to 25 people so we are going to invite other departments in the area to send members to fill the class. Training days like this are very valuable but they are not cheap. This day of training will cost $2000.00. There is a rescue kit that we will be using for this course. It consists of barrel shaped cylinder that splits in half to be assembled inside the bin and then set over the person who is stuck. There is a drill powered auger that empties the barrel as it drops down around the person. There are also mats, straps and other pieces that come with this kit. The cost of this kit is about $4500.00. If you or someone you know could help us recover some of the costs on this, please feel free to contact any member of our department, myself or Chief Justin Bast. Tax receipts can be issued. Any Donations big or small will help and are greatly appreciated. If you have any questions, do not hesitate giving one of us a call.

Thank you and be safe out there everyone!! Happy Spring.
